ROOSEVELT'S CENTURIONS: FDR AND THE COMMANDERS HE LED TO VICTORY IN WORLD WAR II

Random House. 1 Cloth(s), 2013. hard. Book Condition: New. All American presidents are commanders-in-chief; few perform as such in practice. Historian Joseph Persico reveals here how Franklin D. Roosevelt seized the levers of wartime power during World War II like no president since Abraham Lincoln during the Civil War. FDR assumed the role of strategist and, though surrounded by star-studded generals and admirals, he made clear who was running the war, involving himself in everything from choosing bomber targets to planning naval convoys to the design of landing craft. Persico explores whether his strategic decisions, including his insistence on the Axis powers' unconditional surrender, helped end or possibly prolonged the war."When I was a boy growing up in the South Bronx, my heroes were Roosevelt's centurions. As a soldier for 35 years, I made them my mentors and models. These men were heroes. They were fallible and occasionally vain, but we were certainly blessed to have such Americans leading the Greatest Generation during the world's greatest conflict. Of course, the greatest centurion of them all was FDR himself, who knew how to lead his commanders, stroke their egos, and get the best from them, yet never left any doubt as to who was commander in chief. Joe Persico, my valued collaborator on my memoirs, has brought his formidable talents to bear to bring the centurions to life."Colin Powell 651.
